HAUPTMANN CAGY ON STAND, NOT TYPE EASY TO TRAP IN UNINTENTIONAL ADMISSIONS

Uncommunicative to Wife as Well as His Friends; Criminal Record Works Against Him

This is the ninth of a series of 12 articles on the forthcoming trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, alleged slayer of the Lindbergh baby.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Dec. 19.—(INS)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's past record is against him.

The iron-willed, close-mouthed man who goes on trial here on January 2, charged with the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., is an ex-convict. He "did time" in jail in Germany before coming to the United States in 1923.

Over here he went to work as a carpenter, a job he held for about 10 years. He didn't come to the attention of the police in this country until he was arrested last September as a suspect in the Lindbergh case.

Hauptmann used the name of "Pellmeier" when he first tried to smuggle himself into the United States. The second time, when he was successful in getting in, he gave his right name.

The German police record of Hauptmann was recently made public by Attorney General Wilentz. It showed that Hauptmann was implicated in nine different crimes and that on one occasion, taking part in a highway robbery at the age of twenty, he urged his companion to fire on two women who refused to stand still as he ordered.

Hauptmann was born November 26, 1899, at 64 Bautzener street, in Kamenz, Saxony, Germany, and lived there at the time of his crimes. He was a machine gunner during the world war and later a machinist.

His first arrest was for a burglary at Rackett's on the night of March 14, 1919, the loot being 400 marks in cash, one watch and a watch chain. The next night the burglars (Hauptmann worked with a pal) broke into the home of Mayor Schierach in Bernbrunn, taking 300 marks and a silver watch.

The high spot of the German Dossier on Hauptmann has to do with "Case 4," in which Hauptmann and an accomplice, Fritz Petzold, were involved as follows:

"The criminals held up two women on the road between Weiss and Nebelschütz, one woman residing in Opitz and the other in Wendischbaselitz. These women were pushing baby carriages and were walking behind them. They stopped there and said 'stand still and unpack.' They stopped the carriage of one of the women and took out nine rolls and eight foodstuff cards—these cards were issued to each family during and after the war in order to distribute equally bread, flour, etc., to every family—and a pocketbook containing three marks.

"At first the women refused to stop and Petzold, using an army pistol, which was loaded and belonging to Hauptmann, pointed same at the women and threatened them, and both called to the women: 'We'll shoot; we're radicals.' Hauptmann urged Petzold to shoot, which Petzold failed to carry out. They split the proceeds in the woods."

Hauptmann, after being involved in various other crimes, was sentenced to two years, six months and one week at a trial in Bautzen on June 17, 1919. He received an additional sentence of two years and six months for highway robbery. This made a total sentence of five years and one week.

Hauptmann started to serve this sentence on July 9, 1919. Released on parole on March 30, 1923, he was subsequently questioned about three thefts of drive belts. He was turned over to the authorities again but escaped in the jail yard. Later it was learned he had smuggled himself into the United States.

He doesn't relish discussing his past. He seemed annoyed at Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey when the latter quizzed him about his record during the extradition hearing in New York city.

Hauptmann, on the stand, is a cagey witness. He takes plenty of time in answering questions he thinks might involve him. He talks with a marked German accent. He gives the impression of being a man of strong will, an individual not likely to be stampeded. He invariably pauses before replying to a question.

By nature he is aloof, taciturn and not given to telling anybody his business. Apparently there were a lot of things he didn't even tell his wife, Anna.

Death came to Elmer Fronk, Aristes, Columbia county, a 19 year old helper, ten minutes after he was admitted to the Montgomery Hospital here suffering with a fractured skull and a broken leg. Elmer's brother, Wilbur, 17, driver of the truck and his 17 year old cousin, Herbert Fronk, also riding in the cab of the truck, escaped with lacerations and bruises.

Fish, confessed slayer of the child, goes on trial in West Chester county for the murder, it was indicated today. From the Columbia Medical school came the announcement that the crumbling skull and weather-beaten bones, taken from the yard behind the abandoned house at Greenburg, New York, where Fish admitted committing the crime, had been pieced together and provide a legal corpus delicti.

LABOR DIFFICULTIES DARKEN STEEL OUTLOOK

No End of Wrangling in Sight
And Chances for Markets Mark Time

BITTER WRANGLING

By Arthur H. Wakelee
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
PITTSBURGH, Dec. 19.—(INS)—Facing the new year, a troubled steel industry is still in the throes of its ancient capital-labor controversy, thus far aided but little by a government administration earnestly pleading for a definite settlement.

Bitter wrangling throughout the past year, particularly since mid-summer, has brought no definite solution to the industry's problems and it is unlikely that any agreement can, or will, be effected before the new year is well under way.

Despite the return of union workers to the leadership of the "conservative" group for at least another two-year period, the steel industry today constitutes one of the major question marks in the industrial life of the nation. Consequently, any signs of an early "understanding" between steel leaders and their workers would be hailed with rejoicing in Washington and throughout the country.

Grave labor unrest threatens, however, as the months pass and no indication of a truce between the industry's heads and the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers appears imminent.

The delay by the Steel Labor Board in handing down its decision on Amalgamated requests for company elections has made the atmosphere cloudier.

The recent administration proposal for peace in the controversy only intensified the problem. In that proposal, which was turned down by the American Federation of Labor, leaders of the industry offered to negotiate, individually, with company union representatives and representatives of the A. F. of L. workers.

On the other hand, steel heads continue to maintain the stand that their workers are not represented in general by unions affiliated with the Federation.

Approval of A. F. of L. unionization for the industry vertically, approved at the Federation's convention in San Francisco early last fall, has injected another element to consider in the battle. Craft unions in the industry have emphasized their objection to a program in which they would lose their identity—such as in an industrial union.

The "vertical" unionization plan, however, is heartily backed by Michael Tighe, veteran head of the Amalgamated. In his support of, and co-operation with, the A. F. of L., industrial heads see a direct blow at company unions.

BROTHERS-IN-LAW FIGHT WHEN CAR FAILS TO START

One Called Out of Bed and Then Strikes the Other

COURT HEARS THE CASE

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 19.—Charles Trace, 23-year-old Oxford Valley youth, who pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery before Judge Calvin S. Boyer on Monday afternoon, was given a suspended sentence and placed on probation for a period of three months.

Trace, according to Constable Harry Seifert, of South Langhorne, was arrested December 9, following an alleged assault on his brother-in-law, Rudolph Nobloek, at their home at Oxford Valley.

The argument, which grew into a fight in which Trace is alleged to have struck his brother-in-law with a crow-bar, was the result of the failure of the defendant to get a car started.

"I had to call my brother-in-law out of bed to start his car, which I had borrowed, and I guess it made him pretty mad. He began accusing me of trying to smash up the car. He struck me first, and I made up my mind he could not hit me and get away with it," Trace testified.

Trace further testified that his brother-in-law and family were receiving food orders. He explained to the court that his brother-in-law was attempting to organize a milk route, but as yet had not been able to get it going.

Constable Seifert testified that Trace injured Nobloek's arm so that the fingers were numb.

The defendant assured Judge Boyer that he no longer held any ill will against his brother-in-law. "I would like to join a C. C. C. camp, but I will not be able to do that before January."

County Detective Antonio Russo was appointed probation officer for the defendant.

President Hiram H. Keller adjourned court until January 7, 1935, when it will convene at 10 o'clock.

Charging her husband, Walter J. Jakob, of Philadelphia, with cruel and barbarous treatment, Mrs. May S. Jacob, of Edison, has filed a libel in divorce in the Court of Common Pleas here.

They were married December 24, 1929, in Philadelphia. The separation is alleged to have taken place in May.

FIND KEYS AND SHOTGUN SHELLS AT TORRESDALE MANOR

Careful Search is Made of The
"Kidnap" House On
Walnut Lane

OBTAIN FINGERPRINTS

Every Effort Being Made To Find Body of Murdered
Racketeer

State troopers, Philadelphia detectives and Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo continue today to push their search for the body of William Weiss, Philadelphia racketeer, which is believed to have been hidden near Torresdale Manor.

Weiss was kidnapped and slain more than a month ago after his friends had paid $8,000 for his release.

Yesterday along the bank of the Delaware River 100 feet from the house on Walnut lane, Torresdale Manor, where Weiss was held captive, there were found what are believed to be his automobile keys.

Two keys, with an undecipherable tag attached, were wrapped in a bit of newspaper, dated October 29, two days after the kidnapping. The authorities also found a bunch of keys, one of which may be for a safe deposit box, and three loaded shotgun shells.

Previously a resident of the vicinity found other shotgun shells nearby and one steel-jacketed cartridge for a sub-machine gun.

Keys and cartridges were turned over to Captain John J. Creeden, of the Philadelphia Detective Bureau, who sent a man with the automobile keys to see if they fitted the car from which Weiss was taken as he entered the drive of his Overbrook home.

Philadelphia detectives have made a scientific search of the so-called "kidnap house," and it is said they found and identified fingerprints left by Weiss.

They also have in their possession, carefully hidden away, an Oldsmobile sedan with stolen license plates and many marks of blood, which they believe was used to take Weiss for the "ride" from which he never returned.

CASES OF GRIPPE AND OF INFLUENZA AFFECT THE AREA

Langhorne Manor School
Closes With Only Five of
26 Pupils Present

PRECAUTIONS GIVEN

Christmas Entertainments of
Two Schools Have Been Postponed

With cases of influenza and grippé, and severe colds on the increase in this area, schools are greatly affected.

Only five of the 26 pupils on roll at the Langhorne Manor public school reported for classes on Monday, with the result that the school was closed until further notice. Twenty-one, or about 80 per cent, were ill.

The Croydon public school remains closed, classes being discontinued Monday afternoon when 128 or 35 per cent of the students were absent because of influenza.

Illnesses of grippé, mumps and pneumonia have reached epidemic proportions in the Langhorne area, it is reported.

Yuletide entertainments at both the South Langhorne and Langhorne Manor public schools have been postponed because of the wide-spread illness.

A number of students are absent from the Bristol schools due to various illnesses, but sessions are being continued.

The grippé or a mild type of influenza epidemic has gripped many sections over a wide area. Three schools in Burlington Township, N. J., are closed, and seven schools in the Mt. Holly, N. J., district, as well as a number of schools adjacent to Trenton. Fortunately the influenza does not appear to have any of the virulence of the scourge which leaved such a ghastly toll in this country in 1918, and in several subsequent years, but it is pointed out that tardiness in recognizing the symptoms might well lead to graver complications such as pneumonia.

Some pertinent rules are given in order to check the attacks:

Avoid persons having acute colds. Keep the hands clean, especially at meal times.

Avoid large gatherings in poorly ventilated places.

Thoroughly ventilate offices during lunch period.

Wear adequate clothing.

When suffering from acute cold, go to bed and summon family physician.

No age immune.

Anniversary Meeting of Fire Company Conducted

YARDLEY, Dec. 19.—The December anniversary meeting of Yardley Fire Company, No. 1, was held Friday evening in the club rooms. The company was organized on December 14, 1897, and a special celebration will be planned for the January meeting, at which time the charter members still residing in Yardley will be guests of honor. The committee to arrange the 37th anniversary celebration includes: Fred A. Bebbington, chairman; Louis C. Leedom, Horace Eisenbrey, George Brown, Walter H. Thompson, Joseph Harvey and John J. Jones.

The following were named to be elected at the January celebration: President, Vincent Casey; vice president, J. J. Jones; secretary, Walter H. Thompson; treasurer, Fred A. Bebbington; chief, Louis C. Leedom; trustees, Jesse Billee, Lewis M. Pickett, Edward Bradley, George Brown, Fred G. Satterthwaite, Thomas Carroll, and John J. Jones.

The entertainment committee reported that a table tennis set and an indoor baseball court have been added to entertainment supplies.

TRAFFIC DELAYED BY SLEET

A thin coating of ice on the highways and sidewalks this morning, along with fog and low hanging clouds, delayed traffic during the early hours. Motorists proceeded with caution during the early hours but then later during the morning the ice melted and travelling was not so treacherous.

A FUTILE GESTURE

With the consent—not to say connivance—of his employers, a New York newspaper reporter has applied for admission to the competitive "examination" to be held shortly with the purpose of selecting a new postmaster for that city.

Needless to say, there will be no actual examination. Those who file applications will be investigated as to their previous experience and reputation for probity and the names of the three rated highest as the result of this inquiry will be certified to President Roosevelt by that exemplary champion of the civil service reform, Postmaster General Farley.

Everyone will be greatly surprised if the man Mr. Farley recently appointed as acting postmaster—one Albert Goldman, former city commissioner (under Tammany auspices) of plant and structures—is not among the top three or fails to win the permanent appointment. Betting odds in Wall Street against a possible triumph by the newspaper reporter are said to be roughly 10,000 to 1.

Even at those odds we would decline to lay our money on the journalistic entry. But we have high hopes that the account of his experiences with this fraudulent semblance of a merit system in the filling of first class postmasterhips will help to expose its ridiculousness and will hasten the day when the whole postoffice department will be put under civil service.

MUNITIONS SALES

There is a deadly parallel between the trading of patents on secret military inventions, now charged to the international munitions makers, and the system that has placed weapons of the most terrible modern type in the hands of American criminals.

In the case of the trading of military secrets, the motive and result was to promote the largest possible expenditures by each nation in the race to keep abreast of others in acquiring the latest improvements in military equipment.

In the case of criminal access to the latest wrinkle in the killer's art, the result has been to require every police department and four-corners sheriff similarly to equip themselves, not to mention the widened market for weapons sold to civilians for their own defense.

It has not been proved, or even charged, that any reputable arms manufacturer deliberately supplied criminals, with a view to improving the general market for his products. Yet that has been the effect and the parallel with the international sale of war materials and inventions can not be denied.

It is a parallel that argues for the proposition that trade in deadly weapons, whether international or domestic, is not one that civilization safely may leave to unregulated exploiters for profit.

As it made no mention of mouth washes, facial creams or laxatives a local dial twister claims to have received a radio message from Mars.

Anything that happens to a foot ball substitute after he leaves high school makes him a Grid Star automatically.

All right then—do your Christmas shopping late.

Hauptmann Cagy On Stand Not Easy Type To Trap

He treated her well when he had the money, apparently. He sent her to Europe on a trip. While she was away, however, he spent a good deal of his leisure leading an outdoor life on Hunter's Island, a vacation spot, not far from the Bronx, and there are photographs showing him sunning himself with a good-looking young woman attired in a bathing suit. They seemed to be good friends. Other photographs showed Hauptmann enjoying himself bathing and fishing with male companions.

Hauptmann went to Maine on a vacation trip. On another occasion he took his wife on a motor trip to California. He is also said to have made a trip to an island off the Georgia coast.

Although he worked but little in the last two years he spent a good deal of money. His wife—and his friends—were given the impression he was making good investments in the Wall Street market.

Hauptmann was friendly with a number of young Germans, but so far as is known confided in none of them. They were all surprised when Hauptmann was arrested in connection with the Lindbergh case.

One of Hauptmann's acquaintances, Henry Uhlig, 29 years old, formerly of Germany, who now lives in the Bronx, told the writer he could not believe Hauptmann did the kidnapping. He said Hauptmann must be shielding some one else.

Together with a multitude of rumors that include possible wage reductions, has continued to keep disrupting forces in motion. These have lately been augmented by a "rank and file" movement seeking to build up sufficient strength to gain approval of a national strike at the next Amalgamated convention. Meanwhile, there is a bright future ahead for the industry once its labor problems are ironed out. During the depression years research laboratories were kept busy, and results have been highly encouraging. New uses for steel in various fields, particularly in housing and transportation, have been developed and now only await the opportunity to be put in use.

DICK SHIKAT TO GIVE MARSHALL A BATTLE

TRENTON, Dec. 19.—After last Wednesday's sensational climax to the Arena wrestling show it does not seem possible that anything new can take place on the mat. But when Dick Shikat, former world's champion, clashes with big Floyd Marshall, huge Californian, at the Arena tonight, most anything is liable to happen.

The ex-king was decidedly orthodox in the days when he became champion by pinning Jim Londos in Philadelphia but since mixing with the Duseks, Savoldis and others of the modern slam-bang school he can now show as much rough stuff as the next fellow.

When Shikat renews grilling at Johnny App's mat melée he will have as an opponent a modernist in every sense of the word in Marshall. Bigger and as strong as Shikat, Marshall will try to arm-pull the powerful Trenton into defeat and if there is one weapon that Shikat fears it is the arm-pull. In fact, all the modern offensives are the cause of Shikat quaking in his boots and big Floyd knows them all, the arm-pull, the flying tackle and the others.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

THE cold weather which has more or less blanketed the country has decreased the supply of fresh fruits and vegetables and sharply increased their prices. However, vegetables are particularly good choices at this time. Cabbage and kale are hardy and are still plentiful and fairly low in price. There will be plenty of citrus fruits, apples and nuts for holiday needs at moderate prices. There will also be an ample supply of turkeys, geese, ducks, and roasting chickens. They will be moderately priced. Here are three menus, including a Christmas dinner, made up from reasonable foods.

Low Cost Dinner

Veal Pot Pie with Pastry Crust	Potatoes
Bread and Butter	Prune Whip
Tea or Coffee	Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Pork	Mashed Potatoes
Diced Turnip	Bread and Butter
Squash Pie	Tea or Coffee
	Milk

Christmas Dinner

Tomato Cocktail with Parsley Sprig	Celery
Stuffed Olives	Roast Turkey
Chestnut Stuffing	Giblet Gravy
Sweet Potatoes	Brussels Sprouts
Cranberry or Currant Jelly	Green Salad
Pimento Dressing	Dinner Rolls
Steamed Fruit Cake	Orange Sauce
	Coffee

BROKEN NECK NO BAR

ANTONITO, Colo. (INS).—By train and ambulance, Mrs. Charles Lamb, 76, of Idaho Springs, Colo., traveled 600 miles with her neck broken to spend the holidays with her daughter, Mrs. George J. Riedel, at Antonito. She said the trip caused her no undue discomfort. She was injured in an automobile accident near Rock Springs, Wyo., while returning home with her husband from Salt Lake City.

CHRISTMAS

The snow comes down,
And sleighbells jingle;
The kiddies all tingle,
And folks don't frown—
Oh, Christmas is on its way!

There's a little fat man,
So jolly and red,
Who has a great plan
When you're all a-bed—
Oh, Christmas is almost here!

He'll slip down your chimney,
And under your tree;
Put lovely, gay presents
For you and for me—
Oh, Christmas is here!

He'll fill all the stockings,
That gay little fellow;
He'll work as he sings,
(He's so sweet and mellow)—
Oh, Christmas is really here!
